

Notes

Dominic Razlaff (aka DR) returns to CerebralAudio with a new release: This Way.

Dominic's minimal approach to drone music makes for excellent listening any time: driving, or studying, working or meditating.

This Way is a statement about music, and particularly drone works. He is sticking close to the original Brian Eno inspired concept of drone works: they should be minimal in terms of structure and movement. They have the capacity to both be listened to and ignored at the same time. Ambient music by its very nature, is an audio experience that enhances the environment.

While many ambient artists have broken from the original concept of ambient music (some very successfully, some not very successfully) Dominic has decided to show use the way with This Way.

Biography

Dominic Razlaff (aka DR), born 1982 is an ambient musician from Braunschweig, Germany. Interested in making music since 2007. In the year 2009 he bought his first synthesizer (Novation Xio), that has changed a lot. From this day DR was more interested in sounddesign and it has moved more and more towards ambient music. Currently he produce the most tracks with classic subtractive synthesis and record it on a Fostex X-15, later edited with some granular synthesis tools and field recordings. Uses synthesizers, field recordings, tape loops & granular synthesis to create melancholy, deep, ambient / drone soundscapes.
